A LETTER FROM JEFFERSON.

MINNESOTA MAN.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 19.—Harry Hill of Fairbault, Minn., owns an autograph letter written by Thomas Jefferson in 1814, which gives in a measure a cause for the "Jeffersonian simplicity" of the famous lawmaker. Bishop Whipple, the eminent Episcopal divine, recently found the letter among his papers, and it is today published for the first time. It was given to Bishop Whipple by a New-York gentleman many years ago, and he in turn gave it to his relative, Mr. Hill. It is an interesting literary relic. The following is a true copy, even to punctuation, spelling, and capitalization:

MONTICELLI, July 23, 1814.

DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 13th is received indorsing my account, by which I perceive you are greatly in advance on the stock of my flour now in your hands. I am in hopes you have sold it, as I see little immediate hope from holding it up. They tell us indeed of 7000 militia and regulars collected at Norfolk, these would call I suppose, for 500 Barrels of flour a week which might give a little motion to sales on James river, as they can get it nowhere else, but I see that no effect from so feeble a cause can make the produce in your hands adequate to my calls, an ordinary living price would do it, but nothing short of that; besides a draught of this day in favor of Joseph B. Proctor for 63D 9c, I owe neighborhood debts, chiefly for corn, the consequence of the unexampled drought of the last year, to the amount of 600D of which 200D are immediately wanting and the rest soon demandable. I have to remit to Philadelphia shortly 140D and in the course of 2 or 3 months, shall need 1000D more, for all which I have no resource but the produce in your hands, the wheat just now severed, and the tobacco now growing. Of the former the crop is indifferent, it will yield about 500 Barrels of flour only; the tobacco probably about 30,000 weight, until these come in I shall be much distressed to get along, unless the bank will indulge me with an addition of 1000, or 1500D to my note at it's next renewal. I had counted confidently on a very contrary operation on that note; but embargoes and blockades have defeated all the resources counted on, I must request you to ask this favor from the bank and to send me by post the 200D above mentioned as wanted here immediately: and I shall be anxious to hear from you; for I assure you I am in a state of great uneasiness from the suppression of the ordinary means of payment, occasioned by the times, my mill too, which has heretofore rented for 1250D now brings nothing, because people avoid the expense of manufacturing what cannot be sold. Accept the assurance of my great esteem and respect

Mr Gibson

INTRODUCTORY.

In the following pages an attempt has been made to bring together the titles of the books written by, or relating to, Thomas Jefferson. The arrangement is alphabetical, under the name of the author when this is known, otherwise under the first word of the title, omitting particles.

To avoid cross-references, in the body of the work, books issued anonymously, or under a pseudonym, and there placed under the name of the real author, are given in the first Index under a short title.

The initials following some of the titles indicate the public libraries in which the books may be consulted.

[Price Half a Dollar.] MDCCCI.

8vo, pp. 96.

C. 25*

Callender was a Scotchman and a political writer of some notoriety before coming to this country. His writings here were characterized by a severe invective, and for his abuse of the Federal Administration he was tried for sedition and convicted. At the time of writing "The Prospect Before Us" he was friendly to Jefferson, and sought to advocate the interests of the Republicans by denouncing Adams; later, however, he became equally violent against Jefferson himself. Callender was drowned while bathing in the James River at Richmond, Va., July, 1803.

Vide. McMaster's "History of the People of the United States," vol.

II., pp. 338, 468-72, 618-19. See also "Life of Jefferson," by Randall, vol. III., pp. 18 and 19.

A notice of "The Prospect Before Us" is printed in The Magazine of American History, vol. XVII., (April, 1887,) pp. 284-5.

[Callender (J. T.).]

Letters to Alexander Hamilton, King of the Feds, Ci-Devant Secretary of the Treasury of the United States of America, Inspector-General of the Standing Armies Thereof, Counsellor at Law, &c., &c., &c. Being intended as a Reply to a Scandalous Pamphlet lately published under the sanction, as it is presumed, of Mr. Hamilton, and signed with the signature of Julius Philænus. By Tom Callender, Esq., Citizen of the World. New York: Printed by Richard Reynolds, No. 27 Dey Street. 1802.

8vo, pp. 64.

C., N. 26

I place this book alphabetically under Callender, although I am inclined to agree with Mr. Ford, Bibliotheca Hamiltoniana, p. 67, that Callender did not write it; the pamphlet criticises the Philænus Letter, No. 198 infra; in 1802, Callender was as bitter towards Jefferson as he had formerly been against the Federalists.

Reprinted as follows: Letters to Alexander Hamilton, King of the Feds. New York: Printed for the Hamilton Club, 1866, Bradstreet Press.

4to and 8vo, pp. (4) 89.

Sixty copies printed, of which 20 were in quarto. This reprint forms No. IV. of the Hamilton Club Series.

8vo, pp. 200.

56

William Duane was born in America in 1760 but of Irish extraction; he went to Ireland with his mother in early life, and afterwards to India, where he established a newspaper called The World. In 1795 he came to Philadelphia, and wrote for the Aurora, then under the editorial management of Benjamin Franklin Bache, and of which, in 1799, upon the death of Bache, he became the editor. The Aurora exerted a great influence upon the politics of the country and, in the hands of Mr. Duane, was an ardent supporter of Jefferson.

Notes on the State of Virginia.

These notes were written by Mr. Jefferson in answer to inquiries propounded to him by the Marquis de Barbé-Marbois, then Secretary of the French Legation in Philadelphia. Jefferson had two hundred copies privately printed in Paris in 1784, but dated 1782, for distribution among his friends abroad and in America.

[Jefferson (Thomas).]

Notes on the State of Virginia; Written in the Year 1781, somewhat Corrected and Enlarged in the Winter of 1782, for the Use of a Foreigner of distinction in Answer to certain queries proposed by him respecting 1, Its Boundaries ; 2, Rivers ; 3, Sea Ports ; 4, Mountains ; 5, Cascades and Caverns ; 6, Productions, mineral, vegetable and animal ; 7, Climate ; 8, Population ; 9, Military Force ; 10, Marine Force ; 11, Aborigines ; 12, Counties and Towns ; 13, Constitution ; 14, Laws ; 15, Colleges, Buildings and Roads ; 16, Proceedings as to Tories ; 17, Religion ; 18, Manners ; 19, Manufactures ; 20, Subjects of Commerce ; 21, Weights, Measures and Money ; 22, Public Revenue and Expences ; 23, Histories, Memorials and State Papers. MDCCLXXXII.

8vo, pp. (2) 391. C., H., S., P.H.S. 96

Contains an Eye-draught of Madison's Cave, and folded Table of Names of Indian Tribes.

The pages from 367 to 391 comprise the Appendix, made up of observations furnished to Jefferson by Mr. Charles Thomson, Secretary of Congress.

A copy of this book in the Lenox Library contains the following note in Jefferson's handwriting : " Mr. Jefferson having had a few copies of these Notes printed to offer to some of his friends and to some other estimable characters beyond that line, begs the Abbé Morellet's acceptance of a copy ; unwilling to expose them to the public eye, he asks the favor of the Abbé Morellet to put them into the hands of no person on whose care and fidelity he cannot rely to guard them against publication."

This copy is as above described ; the copy mentioned by Rich (Bibliotheca Americana Nova, p. 301), presented to M. de Malesherbe, and the copy mentioned in the John Carter Brown Catalogue (Part III., vol. II., p. 192), presented to Dr. Bancroft, have the same note, and are also described as above, from which it is evident that the first copies issued by Jefferson had no additional matter.

Appended, however, to many copies of the Notes in the form of a separate pamphlet is the " Draught of a Fundamental Constitution for the Commonwealth of Virginia," pp. 14, some of the copies of which, I am cognizant, contain, besides the " Draught of a Fundamental Constitution," " Notes on the Establishment of a Money Unit, and of a Coinage for the United States," pp. 14, and " An Act for Establishing Religious Freedom, passed in the Assembly of Virginia in the beginning of the year 1786," pp. 4. The " Draught of a Fundamental Constitution," and the "Notes on the Establishment of a Money Unit" had both been prepared by Mr. Jefferson before the "Notes on Virginia" were printed in Paris. The "Act for Establishing Religious Freedom," however, was not passed until more than a year after the Notes were printed. Its presence in the copies referred to is accounted for on the ground that Jefferson had it put in type after it had passed, and added to such copies of the Notes as he had not yet distributed among his friends; the type and paper being the same as the body of the work indicate this. Jefferson was the author of the Act, and introduced it into the Assembly of Virginia in 1778 or 1779, but it did not become law until the year above mentioned. The type of the first two appendices is the same, although different from that of the body of the book; the paper, however, is similar to that of the book itself. One of the copies which I have seen, containing the three additional pamphlets, was a presentation copy: "Mr. Jefferson begs Mr. Sparrmann's acceptance of this volume," which clearly shows that the work as now found in its completest form was made up by Jefferson himself when in Paris.

The copy of the Notes in the State Library at Albany is composed of the proof-sheets having the author's corrections. [See article of Dr. E. B. O'Callaghan in Historical Magazine, vol. III., Second Series (Feb., 1868), p. 96.] This copy has the "Draught of a Fundamental Constitution" only.

Jefferson's reason for desiring to prevent the publication of the Notes was because he feared that the terms in which he spoke of slavery and the Constitution might produce an irritation in the minds of his countrymen against reformation in these two articles. See Letter to Monroe, Jefferson's Works (Con. Ed.), vol. I., p. 348.

A copy, however, upon the death of its owner, found its way into the hands of a French publisher who caused it to be translated as below:

J[efferson (Thomas).]

Observations sur la Virginie, Par M. J * * *. Tra-duites de l'Anglois. A Paris. Chez Barrois, l'ainé, Libraire, rue du Hurepoix, près le pont
Saint-Michel. 1786.

8vo, pp. (4) xiii., 290 (iv.). Map and Table.

97

The number 290 is a misprint and should read 390. The map which appeared in this translation was engraved by S. J. Neele, and prepared under Jefferson's supervision; it was also used in the English edition of 1787.

This translation was made by the Abbé Morellet and, as he claims, in a note in his copy above alluded to, with Jefferson's consent; it contains many mistakes although in part revised by Jefferson. In a letter to George Wythe, dated Paris, Aug. 13, 1786 (Works, vol. II., p. 6), alluding to the Notes, Jefferson says: "A bad French translation, which is getting out here, will oblige me to publish the original more freely, which it does not deserve and which I did not intend." Jefferson consented to its republication in England by Stockdale of London, who had asked leave to print the book, and who issued the following :

Messages.

In this list of messages I have given only the most important of those which I have found. Those which are omitted contain only a few lines by Jefferson, and merely transmit documents.

A complete set of the Messages by Jefferson, as separately printed pamphlets, is not believed to be in existence. The set that would naturally be found in Washington was destroyed at the burning of the Capitol in 1814. "A Descriptive Catalogue of the Government Publications of the United States, from September 5, 1774, to March 4, 1880," compiled by Ben: Perley Poore, was issued from the Government Printing-Office in Washington in 1885, and purports to contain a list of the messages and papers by Jefferson, and other matters relating to him, which were printed by order of Congress.

8vo, pp. viii., 145.

The cases from 1730 to 1740 were extracted by Jefferson while at the bar, from three manuscript volumes of Reports in the possession of John Randolph, Attorney-General of Virginia. Those from 1768-72 were some of the leading cases of that day, arising under the laws of Virginia, which were committed to writing by Jefferson himself. The above volume was prepared for the press by Thomas Jefferson Randolph, the legatee of Jefferson's manuscript papers.

Memoirs, Correspondence and Private Papers of Thomas Jefferson, late President of the United States. Now first published from the original manuscripts. Edited by Thomas Jefferson Randolph, Henry Colburn, and Richard Bentley. 1829.

4 vols., 8vo. Portrait.

N. 178

This is a reprint of the first American Edition.

"These volumes begin with a short fragment concerning Jefferson himself, drawn up at the age of seventy-seven: and close with a still shorter journal kept by him while Secretary of State during Washington's administration. The rest consists exclusively of a voluminous correspondence, ranging from 1775, after blood had been spilt at Boston, to June, 1826, ten days only before his death, so appropriately fixed for the fiftieth anniversary of American Independence."—Edinburgh Review, vol. LI., p. 500.

"The name of Jefferson will be ranked among the principal ornaments of literature and philosophy. Mr. Jefferson will occupy an elevated place in the very highest order of writers—the one of which Cicero and Burke are the great exemplars in ancient and modern times,—writers, who by combining literary and active pursuits, and exhibiting in both a first-rate talent, furnish in their own works the most complete reflection that can possibly be given of the finished man."—ALEXANDER H. EVERETT in North American Review, vol. XXXI., p. 34.

Also, Madison's Report, Calhoun's Address, Resolutions of the Several States in Relation to State Rights. With Other Documents in Support of the Jeffersonian Doctrines of '98. "Liberty, the Constitution, Union." Published by Jonathan Elliot. Washington, May, 1832.

8vo, pp. 82.

The immediate cause of the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions was the opposition to the "Alien and Sedition Laws." The Kentucky Resolutions were originally prepared by Jefferson, and passed, with some changes, by the Kentucky Legislature on the 14th of November, 1798. The Virginia Resolutions, of similar import, were passed by the Legislature of that State on the 24th of December of the same year. They were a protest against the Alien and Sedition Laws as "palpable and alarming infractions of the Constitution."

Strictures upon the Letter Imputed to Mr. Jefferson, Addressed to Mr. Mazzei. Printed, June, 1800.

Signed "Greene."

8vo, pp. 12.

258

This letter (Jefferson's Works, vol. IV., p. 139), dated April 24, 1796, was written to Mr. Philip Mazzei, an Italian by birth, but who had been for a long time a resident of Virginia, and a neighbor and intimate friend of Jefferson's. Upon the reception of the letter by Mr. Mazzei, then in Florence, he, without permission, published a translation of it in the Florentine Gazette. It was translated into French, and printed in the Moniteur, the official paper of the French government. From thence it was translated into English. Naturally some changes from the original was the result of all these translations. The letter created quite a stir at the time, and was severely commented upon by the Federalist newspapers. See Tucker's "Life of Jefferson," vol. I., pp. 517-528, and Randall's "Life," vol. II., 363 and following pages.

12mo, pp. ix. 203. 269

This writer claims that John Breckinridge, who introduced them into the Kentucky Legislature, "was the master workman and responsible author of the Resolutions." He admits, however, that Breckinridge sought and received aid from Mr. Jefferson, and used a draught of resolutions largely composed by Jefferson himself, but so revised and modified by Breckinridge as to really make them his own.

8vo, pp. 506.

N., BA., C., P.H.S. 279

Contains a Biography of Thomas Jefferson.

This book was printed and ready for publication in December, 1801, but was suppressed at the instigation of Aaron Burr as being incorrect and also libelous. Overtures were made to the publishers, Messrs. Barlas and Ward, by Burr and his friends, for the purchase of the edition, and it was finally given up to them. The book was subsequently issued, and the following advertisement appeared in the New York Evening Post for June 2, 1802.

"This day is published in one large octavo volume and for sale by Naphtali Judah, 84 Maiden Lane, The History of the Administration of John Adams, Late President of the United States. By John Wood, Author of the History of Switzerland and Swiss Revolution. The above is the work said to have been suppressed by the Vice-President."

Copies of the history exist with the title-page mutilated by having the names of Barlas and Ward cut out. When the book was placed on sale a new title-page was added bearing the imprint, "New York Printed 1802."

James Cheatham published a "Narrative" of its suppression, see our No. 31, ante, which was answered by John Wood in "A Correct Statement of the Various Sources from which the History of the Administration of John Adams was compiled and the Motives of its Suppression by Col. Burr, with Some Observations on a Narrative by a Citizen of New York." New York, 1802. 8vo, pp. 58.

The history was reprinted in Philadelphia in 1846, under the title: "The Suppressed History of the Administration of John Adams (from 1797 to 1801), as printed and suppressed in 1802. By John Wood . . . now republished with Notes, and an Appendix by John Henry Sherburne." Sm. 8vo, pp. 391. Portrait.
